

Villa Verdi

Region: Le Marche Sleeps: 11

Overview

Villa Verdi is a grand stone farmhouse sitting in the wooded Appenine hills 700 meters above sea level, between the regions of Marche and Umbria. The faithful renovation of this property has created an enchanting country holiday home with all the necessary amenities, without changing the original features or detracting from the character of the house.

With rooms set across multiple levels that integrate with the gradient of the hillside, Villa Verdi offers a breath-taking view of the evergreen woodlands that spread across the valley below. With space to accommodate up to 12 people, the house is ideal for a large group looking for an escape in which they can immerse themselves in nature.

After a day of exploring the tranquil countryside or splashing about in the private pool (situated just a few metres below the house), guests can come together over dinner in the spacious dining room, or huddle round the 15th century fire place. Under wood beam ceilings and within thick stone walls there is a true connection to nature in this house, from its secluded location to the original foundations of the house.

- The stone farmhouse is beautifully integrated with its hilltop location, and provides a private slice of Marche countryside.
- The property has maintained some wonderful features, and is traditionally furnished to give an authentic Marche region experience.

What you should know...

- Those who are more familiar with catered accommodation may find this property a challenging adjustment, due to its secluded positioning.
- There isn't much of a tourist scene in the local area, so the opportunity for socialising and meeting new people is not great. However, relishing the privileged position of being alone in natural beauty is what this property is all about!
