Location & Local Information

Beautiful Trogir is situated on a small island to the west of Split, offering stunning architecture and historic sights alongside cool bars and waterfront restaurants. Its location is convenient for visitors – Trogir’s proximity to Split makes it easy to combine the two, and boat excursions to the likes of Šolta and Brač are possible, too.

Trogir’s main attraction, the three-naved St. Lawrence’s Cathedral, is a showstopper and regarded as one of the finest churches in Croatia. Kamerlengo Castle is an ancient fortress that offers stunning views, while the Trogir Museum provides an in-depth look at the area’s history. South of the Old Town, you will find the popular Okrug Gornji pebble beach, a lengthy stretch lined with cafés and bars.

Around 30 minutes’ drive down the coast, Split is famed for the magnificent Diocletian’s Palace, but it’s just one of the highlights of its grand Old Town. Culturally, the Split Gallery of Fine Arts, the Archaeological Museum and the Mestrovic Gallery, showcasing the work of the country’s greatest sculptor, are among places of note. Plenty more has been added to this vibrant city in recent years, including the region’s largest aquarium. Marjan Hill is the city’s green lung, offering a good place to stop when you need a break from the crowds.

Northeast of Trogir, Krka National Park is the home of seven stunning waterfalls and a 15th-century Franciscan Monastery on Visovac Island. The impressive town of Šibenik is also around 45 minutes away and shouldn’t be overlooked – it too boasts a notable cathedral in the form of a World Heritage Site, St James’, and is an excellent place for the kids in summer. Šibenik hosts the annual International Children’s Festival, which brings a variety of entertainment to its charming streets.
