Location & Local Information

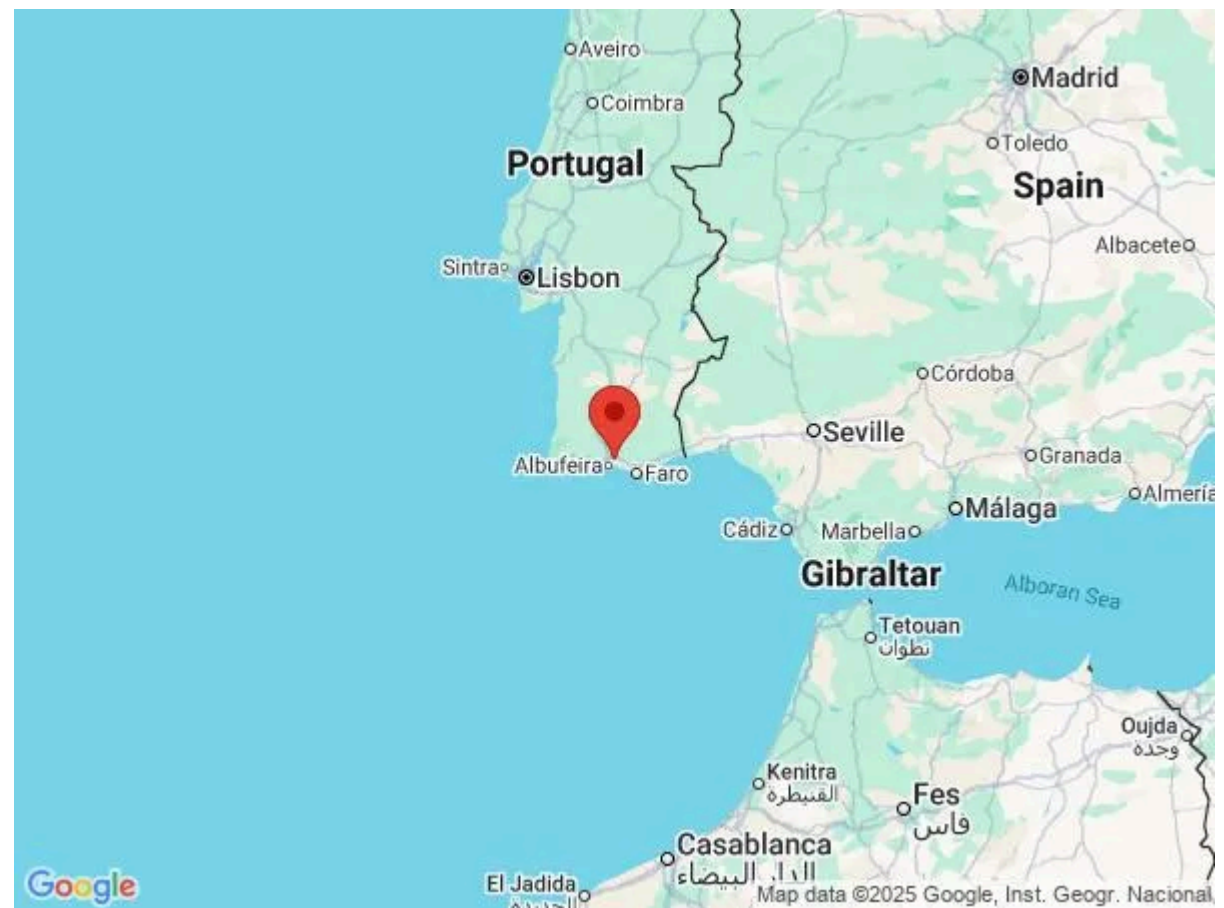

Malhao is a very pretty, quiet hamlet, just 4km from the charming village of Boliquieme which dates back to the 12th century. With cobbled streets, little shops, cafes, a few restaurants and locals enjoying their coffee and a good game of dominoes, Boliquieme is lovely.

The Castle of Perderne, an old Moorish castle constructed in the 12th century is 9km away. The village Perderne is quaint and pretty. A little further, Guia is famous for its delicious piri-piri chicken which is barbecued on charcoal and spiced with hot chilli sauce. You can sample piri-piri dishes all over the Algarve, but Guia has the best reputation. In the opposite direction, you can also visit Loule, Almancil and Sao Lourenco.

Loule has a lot more shops and restaurants and is very popular for its markets. On Saturdays, there is a farmer's market and the gipsy market as well as the busy and colourful Moorish inspired covered market. You can buy handicrafts, local produce and freshly caught fish at the covered market. There are many beautiful historical buildings in Loule, including the Gothic Igreja Matriz Church, so it is a good trip.

One of the prettiest churches in the whole of the Algarve is The Sao Lourenco Church. Its stunning azulejo work dates back to 1730. The neighbouring town Almancil is known for its pottery shops and workshops. If you enjoy tasting wines, Quinta da Tor is close by. You can taste some delicious authentic Algarvian wines together with scrummy olive oil and bread. Alternatively, the Quinta da Miradouro winery near Guia offers the Vida Nova wines specially produced for Sir Cliff Richard. Tours are available but must be pre-booked.

Olhos d'Agua is the nearest beach to the villa, and the resort is delightful. Busier than Olhos d'Agua is Albufeira and Vilamoura. Praia do Peneco, Praia da Oura, Praia da Coelha, Praia de Sao Rafael, Praia da Falesia, Praia dos Arrives, Praia do Castelo and Praia de Santa are just some of the fabulous beaches in the area. Visitors enjoy Albufeira's town beach of Praia do Peneco which is reached through a tunnel through the cliffs or by taking an elevator from the fabulous promenade. The promenade is trendy for an evening stroll to enjoy the sunsets.

Just along the coast, Vilamoura is smart and sophisticated with high-end dining, especially around the marina. It is home to six renowned golf courses as well as equestrian, football and tennis centres. Cyclists enjoy the traffic-free tracks and paths and the fabulous views over the dramatic cliffs. The town also has a famous leading casino where you can try your luck.
