Location & Local Information

The fantastic Villa Argolida is located in the upmarket village of Agios Aimilianos, very close to Porto Heli. There is no other area in Greece with such a concentration of wealth. It is easy to understand why discerning globetrotters head to Porto Heli. The area is absolutely stunning, rich in interesting archaeological sites such as Halieis. It also boasts a vibrant nightlife. Porto Heli's coastline of inlets are calm, warm and sprinkled with luxury yachts together with traditional wooden kaikis. Although incredibly rich, Porto Heli enjoys a rustic, homely feeling, such a wonderful blend to ensure a memorable holiday, especially when you consider that this is also a foodie paradise.

The tourist friendly island of Spetses is a 15 minute ride away from Costa harbour. Spetses' tiny port of Dapia is overlooked by whitewashed, Neoclassical houses, cozy cafes and stylish boutiques. The winding, cobbled coastal path opens to a stunning, wide, timeless piazza and home to the glorious, chateau-styled Poseidonion hotel. Cars are banned from the town so visitors travel in horse-drawn carriages, admiring the fishermen laying out their catches, the impressive villas, domed churches and buzzy tavernas.

As well as the villa's private beach, there are three stunning beaches nearby including Costa Beach, Hrisi Akti Beach and Porto Heli Beach. There are a number of pretty villages and towns to visit close by including Kranidi, Kilada, a small fishing village, the picturesque Ermioni and Epidaurus. Ermioni is built on a cape, surrounded by fragrant pine trees, so it strongly resembles an island. It boasts stunning beaches, a charismatic harbour lined with popular fish restaurants and some clubs. The beaches include little coves around Bisti, Kouverta Beach, Petrothalassa, Dardiza and Sentoni. Epidaurus is one of the most popular archaeological sites in Greece, mostly famous for its Ancient Theatre which is in an excellent state of conservation. During the summer there are festivals at the weekends.
