In the main square of Pollensa resides the Pollensa Museum, a free attraction with a far-reaching history. This museum was built between 1588 and 1616, hosting a large collection of Gothic altarpieces from that era. In the 1960s, the Pollensa Museum was acclaimed at the Summer Exhibition of Painting, allowing the landmark to finally be founded in 1975. Pollensa is also home to a large local market, drawing both tourists and locals to the centre of the main plaza every Sunday. Pollensa Market contains over 300 stalls, all of which sell a variety of goods from a selection of native merchants. Guests are encouraged to take their time and browse through the stalls, picking up some artisan clothes, bags, and other souvenirs. The merchants also provide a range of fresh fruit and vegetables.
