Location & Local Information

Pollensa showcases a catalogue of expressive tourist attractions, providing an exciting getaway for any type of traveller. Puig de Maria is one of the region's most iconic landmarks and signifies the rich religious history of this area. At the top of a looming 330-metre summit sits an archaic 14th-century monastery. This monastery was first used as a shrine to the Virgin Mary but was forced to close in 1564. Luckily, it was able to reopen in 1638, presenting the monument that we see before us today. Guests are welcome to explore the interior of the building and are able to observe the collection of well-preserved artefacts in more detail. Puig de Maria is around 10-minutes away from the centre of the region and it is said that it only takes half an hour to climb to the top of the hill.

For lovers of European art, the Pollensa Museum highlights the works of an assortment of local artists, such as the great Atilio Boveri. However, this incredible location was once seen as a humble storage unit that contained a range of ornate Gothic altarpieces. These pieces managed to attract a wealth of attention over the decades, especially at the Summer Exhibition of Painting during the 1960s. In 1975, the museum finally opened its doors to the public and had gone on to be one of the region's most respected institutions. The Pollensa Museum is located just a stone's throw away from the town centre and is open Monday-Friday from 10 am till 2 pm. It should also be noted that this museum is free to enter for all guests, making it a very affordable attraction.

If you are travelling to Pollensa in November, you have the chance to visit La Fira, the town's unconventional craft fair. During these festivities, guests will be transported back to the 18th century, giving them the opportunity to purchase a wealth of traditional items such as woven hats and bags. This festival has been operating since 1784, exemplifying its great significance within the local community. La Fira usually occurs on the fourth Sunday after Saint Lucas, which is usually the second Sunday in November. These events occur outside of Saint Domingo's Cloister, which is located just over 5-minutes away from the centre of Pollensa.
