Location & Local Information

Villa Aldeia is just a 10-minute drive from the centre of Sintra, a bustling hub of culture and vibrancy that has also managed to attract tourists from far and wide for many years. The National Palace of Pena is a genuinely iconic landmark that can be found around 20 minutes away from the villa. First opened in 1854, this monument is teeming with Romantic motifs and delightful stylings, making it a fantastic location to visit if you consider yourself an avid lover of European history. Guests are also encouraged to travel inside to marvel at its unique features, such as the Royal Dining Room and the Noble Room. You must also take the time to observe the exterior of this palace, noting its unusually colourful walls and looming clock tower.

Another royal landmark within this region is The Park and Palace of Monserrate, which is just under 15 minutes from Villa Aldeia. As soon as you arrive, you will be taken aback by the diverse nature of its outdoor grounds, giving guests the perfect opportunity to observe a diverse selection of exotic fauna and horticulture. The palace itself also has a fascinating look, being a wealth of motifs from Indian, Gothic, and Moorish sources. In turn, this is an unmissable landmark for those eager to deepen their understanding of this region's history and how it managed to blend the culture of many communities throughout its time.

A trip to the Initiation Well is a real treat if you are interested in Tarot or other ceremonial practices. This structure comprises two wells that present a selection of spiralling stairs. As such, it resembles two large buildings that travel down to the depths of the earth. These wells also showcase a range of Christian symbols, such as the Knight's Templar Cross, making it a key landmark for believers and other spiritual people. It should also be mentioned that although this monument was designed as a well, it has never been used to deliver water, accentuating its significance as a mysterious religious structure. The Initiation Well is located just over 20 minutes away from the villa.
