Location & Local Information

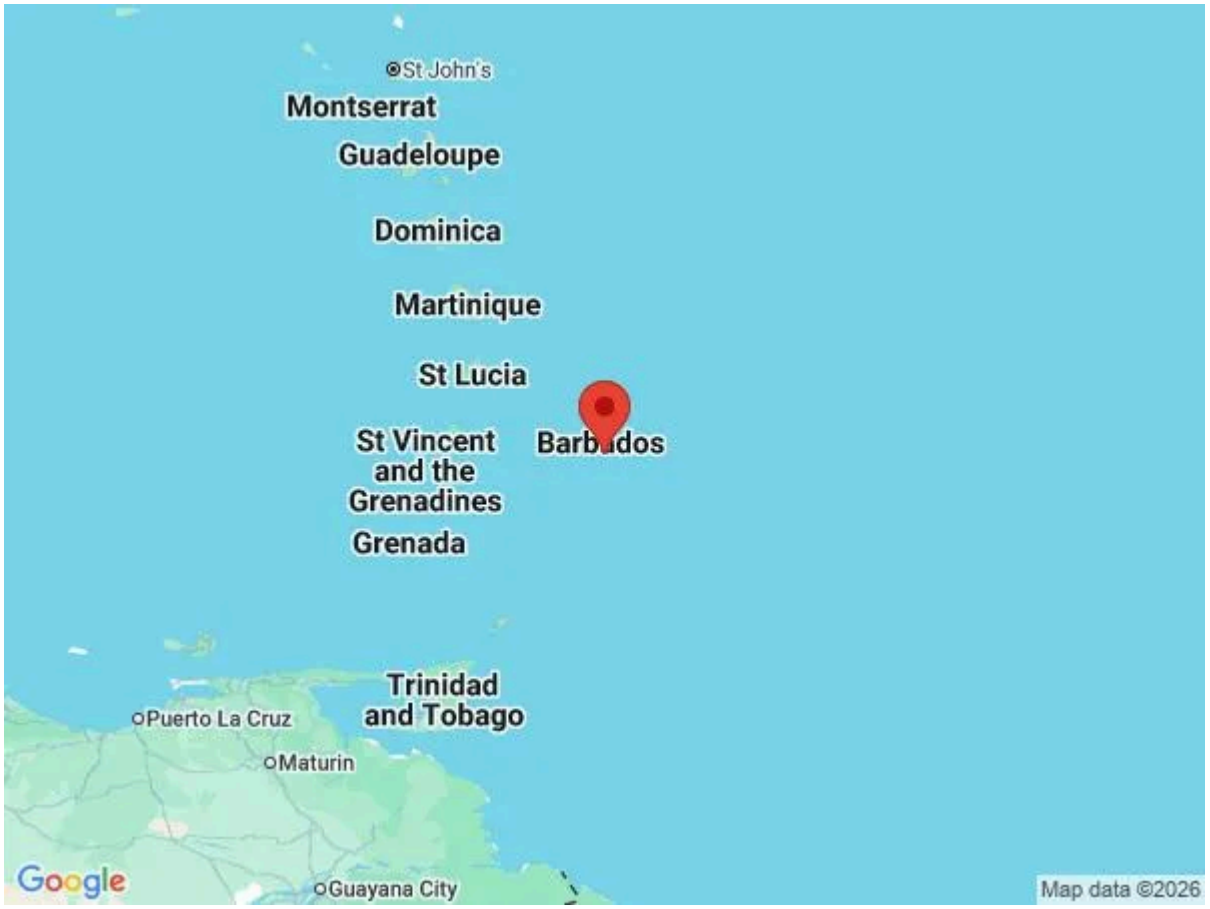

Nestled at the southernmost tip of Barbados lies Oistins, the island's smallest town that exudes character and charm. Its name, a playful distortion of "Austin," pays homage to a once-insobriety-prone plantation owner. Today, Oistins has transformed into a lively fishing village famed for its bars, restaurants, and the quintessential Friday night drinks – a must on the island.

However, Oistins is more than just a hub for libations. The local market boasts an array of fresh fish available to all, and next door, at Bay Garden, you can indulge in the Bajan way of cooking these maritime treasures. The town truly comes alive on weekends, especially Friday nights, with residents and visitors alike immersing themselves in the entertainment and delectable Bajan cuisine. The fish market showcases a variety of local catches, from mahi-mahi and marlin to snapper and the iconic flying fish, a key ingredient in the island's national dish.

Amidst the dining experience, live entertainment and DJ music often grace the stage, occasionally accompanied by impromptu dance performances. For those seeking more traditional ballroom dancing, a short distance west reveals a lively crowd engaging in 'Oldie Goldies' and social dancing.

Oistins isn't just about food and dance; it's a treasure trove of local craftsmanship. Along the shoreline and roadside, skilled artisans showcase their art, craft, and souvenirs, providing an opportunity to immerse oneself in Barbadian creativity.

The town truly shines during the annual Oistins Fish Festival, a week-long celebration culminating over Easter weekend. With events ranging from fish boning competitions and boat racing to gaming tables and cook-offs, the festival encapsulates the essence of Barbadian life and culture. The highlight is the vibrant display of local art and craft for sale, along with an abundance of freshly prepared fish, making it a perfect family affair that attracts locals and visitors alike.

Despite its cultural richness, Oistins seamlessly blends tradition with modernity. Fast food outlets, supermarkets, cafes, restaurants, and shopping centres coexist with the enduring charm of village life, where fishing remains a prominent industry. Whether you visit during the Easter season or any other time of the year, Oistins promises a delightful fusion of delicious food, refreshing drinks, and unforgettable company in this quaint Barbadian town.
