

Maison Bourriette

Region: Midi-Pyrenees Sleeps: 8

Overview

Maison Bourriette is a traditional country home that captures the charm of rural France. Surrounded by one acre of private grounds, this holiday home offers a sense of seclusion while remaining within walking distance of Montaigu-de-Quercy's restaurants, bakery and Saturday morning market.

Inside, the home blends rustic character with thoughtful modern touches. An impressive contemporary kitchen opens directly onto the courtyard garden, where leisurely breakfasts are accompanied by birdsong and morning light. The beamed living area is a natural gathering place, complete with UK television and air-conditioning for comfort on warmer days.

Across the first and second floor, four stylishly appointed bedrooms, each with air-conditioning, offer restful retreats. Two feature en-suite bathrooms, while a family bathroom and flexible sleeping arrangements make the layout ideal for families or couples travelling together.

Outside, linger on the terrace beneath the pergola, challenge friends to a game of croquet, table tennis or badminton, or simply recline by the heated 10-metre swimming pool as the countryside hums around you. Children will love the garden playhouse and swings, while the whole family can enjoy al-fresco meals on the shaded courtyard, complete with a barbecue.

The small market town of Montaigu-de-Quercy is just a 25-minute stroll away, offering all essential amenities, while nearby villages such as Lauzerte, Roquecor and Tournon d'Agenais provide a taste of regional life with their cafés, markets and cultural heritage. For day trips, Penne-d'Agenais and Moissac offer both history and charm, from medieval streets to riverside dining.

Whether enjoying a slow summer with family or exploring the rich tapestry of the Tarn-et-Garonne, Maison Bourriette invites you to settle in and savour the rhythm of rural French life.

Location & Local Information

In the open countryside of the Tarn-et-Garonne, just a leisurely stroll from the charming small town of Montaigu-de-Quercy (1.7km), this idyllic location offers a quintessential taste of rural France, almost equidistant between Cahors and Agen. Montaigu itself is a delight, with its restaurants, bakery, handy supermarket and Saturday morning market – perfect for gathering local produce for long, lazy lunches under the sun.

Pass sunflower fields and vineyards as you explore the region and soak up its gentle, unhurried pace of life. Just a short drive away, the nearby hilltop village of Roquecor boasts a Sunday market and a lively café bar that spills onto the square.

Venture a little further to explore the pretty bastide villages of Lauzerte, Tournon d'Agenais and Montcuq each offering narrow medieval lanes and beautiful architecture where time seems to stand still. Moissac is not to be missed, with its remarkable Romanesque Abbey, UNESCO-listed cloisters and the Pont Napoléon restaurant featured in Rick Stein's French Odyssey.

For a dose of river life, head to the Lot River, where towns like Villeneuve-sur-Lot, Fumel and Puy-l'Évêque line its tranquil banks. Canoeing, riverside dining and leisurely walks make this a perfect day out, with Fumel's château and Villeneuve's lively market adding to the charm. Wine lovers will be drawn to the exquisite town of Cahors, where rich, full-bodied reds can be sampled at source amidst rolling vineyards and scenic drives.

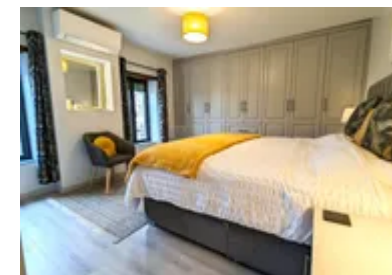

The historic town of Agen, just half an hour away, offers a contrast with its bustling markets, elegant 19th-century architecture and canal-side strolls. Meanwhile, closer to home, Penne-d'Agenais is a gem: a hilltop village with winding streets, stone houses and artisan shops leading to the stunning basilica and sweeping views of the valley below.

Whether you're seeking cultural gems, vineyard visits, picturesque villages or peaceful countryside, this is the perfect base from which to discover the best of south-west France.
