Location & Local Information

Kalkan is a harbour town on Turkey's southwest Mediterranean coast, located between the Taurus Mountains and the Lycian Sea. Formerly a fishing village, it has developed into a well-established holiday destination characterised by whitewashed houses and bougainvillaea-lined streets. The old town features narrow, cobbled streets with a range of rooftop restaurants, boutique shops and bars, many offering sea views. Compared with larger resort towns, Kalkan maintains a relatively small-scale and relaxed atmosphere, attracting visitors interested in scenic surroundings, dining options and a slower pace of life.

The coastline around Kalkan is defined by rocky platforms and clear water rather than wide sandy beaches. The town is known for its beach clubs, which provide direct access to the sea. Nearby, Kaputaş Beach is a popular sandy cove, while Patara Beach offers a longer, undeveloped stretch of shoreline alongside ancient Lycian ruins. The wider region includes a number of archaeological sites, traditional villages and walking routes, including sections of the Lycian Way.

Kördere is a residential area situated on the hills above Kalkan, known for its elevated position and sea views across Kalkan Bay. Properties in this area often benefit from open views towards the offshore islands and surrounding coastline. Kördere generally offers more space and privacy than the town centre and is home to a number of villas with large terraces and private pools. Despite its quieter setting, it is located within a short drive of Kalkan's harbour, restaurants and beach clubs.

What we love

- With two bedrooms sleeping up to four guests, the villa works well for couples, honeymooners or a small family. The layout provides enough space while still maintaining a cosy, private feel.
- Being in the quieter part of Kalkan provides a relaxing setting away from busier areas, while still allowing access to the town and its restaurants and beaches.

What you should know...

- The villa is located in the Kordere area of Kalkan, which is elevated above the town. While this provides excellent sea views, it also means the roads are steep. Guests will usually need a car or taxis to reach the town centre, beaches and restaurants.
