Location & Local Information

Kalkan is a coastal town on Turkey's Turquoise Coast, located in the Antalya province between Fethiye and Kaş. The town sits on the slopes of the Taurus Mountains and overlooks a small harbour and bay along the Mediterranean Sea. Historically a fishing village, Kalkan has developed into a well-known holiday destination while retaining elements of its traditional character. The old town area is made up of narrow streets, whitewashed buildings, and a range of restaurants, cafés, and small shops. The town also provides access to several well-known beaches in the region, including Kaputaş Beach and Patara Beach.

Akbel is a residential area situated on the hillside above Kalkan. It is located a short distance from the town centre and is primarily made up of villas and residential properties. Due to its elevated position, many properties in Akbel have views over Kalkan Bay and the surrounding coastline. The area also includes a small number of local amenities such as supermarkets and restaurants that serve both residents and visitors.

The location of Akbel provides convenient access to Kalkan while offering a quieter setting compared to the centre of town. The area is typically reached by car or taxi within a few minutes. From Akbel, visitors can also travel to other destinations in the region, including nearby coastal towns, beaches, and historical sites along the Lycian coast.

What we love

- Each bedroom has its own bathroom, which adds comfort and convenience for guests staying together.
- Akbel is a quieter residential area of Kalkan, which can appeal to guests looking for a more relaxed environment.
- The jacuzzi provides an additional feature that can enhance relaxation during the stay.

What you should know...

- Akbel is situated on the hillside above Kalkan, which may involve steep roads when travelling to and from the villa.
- Guests will likely need a car or taxi to reach restaurants, beaches and shops.
