Location & Local Information

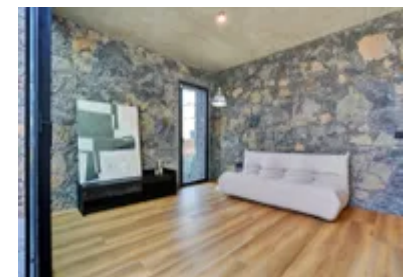

Villa Calderon Hondo is located in the north of Fuerteventura, a region known for its dramatic volcanic landscapes and wide-open scenery. The villa is within walking distance of the village of Lajares (about 20 minutes), a small and characterful community shaped by the island's volcanic landscape. Known for its laid-back atmosphere, Lajares blends traditional Canarian life with a growing selection of cafés, bakeries and independent eateries. Surrounded by open countryside and volcanic formations, the village has become a popular base for exploring the island's northern region while maintaining a relaxed, local feel.

One of the highlights nearby is one of Fuerteventura's best-preserved volcanic craters, Calderón Hondo (the villa's name sake!), where visitors can follow hiking trails up to the rim and take in sweeping views across the surrounding lava fields and neighbouring islands.

From here, guests can also explore the northern coastline, including trips to the nearby harbour of Corralejo where ferries depart for Lobos Island. This small natural island is known for its clear waters, walking paths and quiet coves, making it a popular day trip for swimming, snorkelling and exploring the protected landscape. The surrounding region also offers a range of outdoor activities that reflect the island's desert-like terrain, including guided camel riding excursions across the volcanic landscapes.
