

Cortijo La Almazara

Region: Andalucia Sleeps: 10

Overview

Cortijo La Almazara is a restored 19th-century Andalusian farmhouse located just outside Ronda, surrounded by olive groves, vineyards and lavender fields. Carefully restored by architect Stefano Robotti, a collaborator of Philippe Starck, the cortijo combines the character of traditional rural architecture with a clean, minimalist interior style. With five bedrooms and views across the Serranía de Ronda, the property offers a private setting designed for relaxation and connection with the surrounding landscape.

The outdoor spaces are an important part of the experience. A swimming pool sits among the olive trees, while a spacious 150 m² porch and terrace provides several seating areas with views across the estate and towards the Sierra de Grazalema. Guests can enjoy meals outdoors, take in the surrounding scenery or simply unwind in the peaceful countryside. The property sits within a 26-hectare estate, with access to olive groves, an organic vineyard, gardens and walking trails.

Cortijo La Almazara also offers opportunities to experience the culture of the estate itself. Guests can visit La Almazara, designed by Philippe Starck, to learn about organic olive oil production, explore the museum and take part in guided tastings. As a guest at the Cortijo, you'll enjoy an exclusive 50% discount on this experience. Seasonal activities such as harvest days are also available, adding another dimension to a stay surrounded by Andalusia's rural landscapes.

Location & Local Information

Cortijo La Almazara is located just two minutes from the historic town of Ronda in Málaga province. The villa sits within a large rural estate surrounded by olive groves, vineyards and open countryside, offering views across the Serranía de Ronda and towards the Sierra de Grazalema. La Almazara olive oil museum sits just above the house, and with a 50% discount on Premium tickets, which includes a guided museum tour, visit to the olive groves and olive oil tasting, it's an absolute must-do during your stay.

The nearby town of Ronda is one of Andalusia's most historic destinations, known for its remarkable setting and historic landmarks, including the famous Puente Nuevo bridge, which spans the deep gorge dividing the old and new parts of the town. Visitors can wander through narrow streets lined with whitewashed buildings, discover traditional plazas, visit the historic bullring or enjoy the many viewpoints overlooking the surrounding countryside.

Beyond Ronda, the cortijo sits within the wider landscape of the Serranía de Ronda, a mountainous region defined by rolling hills, olive groves, vineyards and natural parks. This area is known for its scenic drives, walking routes and traditional villages scattered throughout the countryside. The nearby Sierra de Grazalema Natural Park, visible from the property, offers dramatic limestone landscapes and protected natural environments that attract hikers and nature lovers.

What we love

- The renovation of this 19th century house has been beautifully executed to create a unique space without losing any of the original charm and character
- The view from the terrace is stunning, making for a really special back drop to morning coffees and sunset drinks!
- With private access to 26 hectares of olive groves, vineyards, lavender fields and walking paths to explore, you'll never be bored - not to mention Ronda is just two minutes down the road!
- Guests at Cortijo La Almazara can enjoy an exclusive 50% discount on a visit to the brilliant La Almazara olive oil museum next door!

What you should know...

- The swimming pool is set slightly apart from the house and is unfenced, meaning children will require supervision
