Location & Local Information

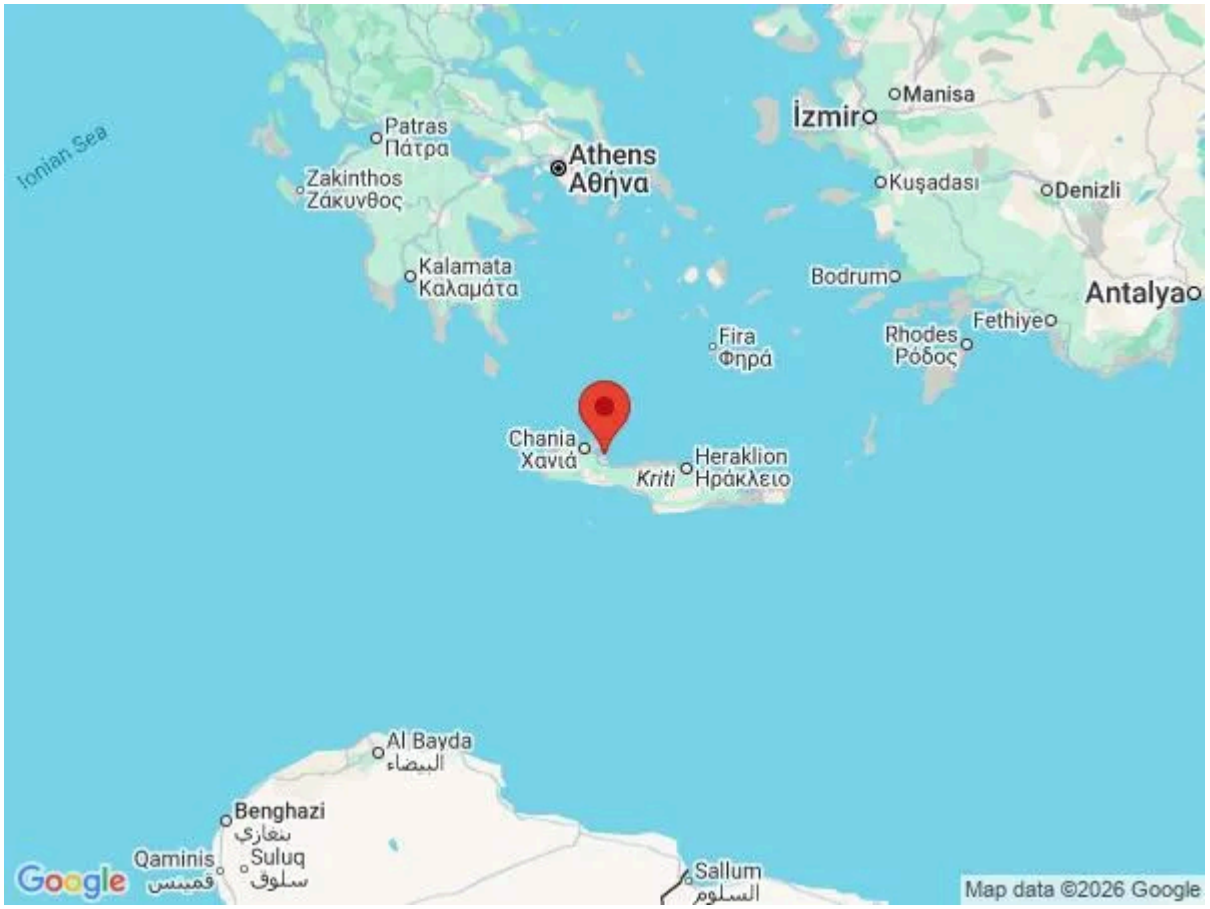

On the northwestern side of the island, in the Chania region, is the village of Kokkino Horio. Situated on a hillside overlooking Souda Bay, it is known for its relatively quiet atmosphere. The name “Red Village” is generally attributed to the reddish soil found in the area. The village features narrow streets, traditional stone houses, and a small number of tavernas. It also offers views across the bay toward the White Mountains (Lefka Ori), which often remain snow-capped into spring.

Kokkino Horio was used as a filming location for the 1964 film Zorba the Greek, which has contributed to its recognition among visitors. Despite this, it has experienced less development compared to more tourist-oriented areas of Crete. It tends to attract visitors seeking a quieter environment. Nearby villages such as Plaka and Almyrida provide access to beaches while Kokkino Horio itself remains relatively undisturbed.

The surrounding area includes walking paths through olive groves and rocky terrain, with viewpoints and small chapels along the way. Close to the village is the Glassblowing Factory, where traditional glassmaking techniques are demonstrated. Overall, Kokkino Horio offers insight into local landscape and lifestyle, with an emphasis on natural surroundings and traditional elements.

What we love

- With Chania's beaches, villages, and local culture nearby, guests can easily explore the island while always having a peaceful retreat to return to.
- Evenings are particularly special thanks to the stunning sunset views, which turn every night into a memorable experience.
- The private heated pool with hydromassage jets adds a touch of indulgence, offering the perfect place to unwind after a day of exploring.

What you should know...

- The pool heating is available at an additional cost, so it's best to request this in advance if you'd like to enjoy the pool during cooler months.
- Guests should be aware that the villa is set in a peaceful, slightly secluded location, which adds to its charm but means a car is recommended for exploring nearby beaches, villages, and Chania town.
