What we love

- Exposed timber throughout the apartment brings warmth and traditional Alpine character to the contemporary interiors.
- The generous balcony provides additional space for outdoor dining, with seating for six.
- The open-plan living, dining and kitchen area makes it easy for families to spend time together after a day on the slopes.
- The shared fitness suite is a useful extra for guests who like to stay active away from the slopes.
- A private ski locker with boot heaters makes storing equipment particularly convenient.
- The dedicated bunk room makes Apartment Huezora particularly well suited to families travelling with children

What you should know...

- Apartment Huezora accommodates a maximum of four adults and two children, with the bunk room intended for the two younger guests.
- Bedroom 2 and the bunk room do not have windows, which is worth considering when deciding the sleeping arrangements
- All three bedrooms share one bathroom with a shower, although there is also a separate guest WC
- The sauna, hammam, sensorial showers and fitness room are shared with other guests in the residence rather than being private facilities. These facilities may have reduced availability or be unavailable outside the ski season and peak summer season, so guests travelling at quieter times should check before arrival.
- The apartment features plenty of exposed wood, so guests may wish to take a little extra care as rougher surfaces could catch clothing or the little chase of causing splinters.
- Apartment Huezora and Apartment Pagnora (https://www.oliverstravels.com/france/french-alps/alpe-dhuez/apartment-paganora) are in the same building, making them a good option for friends or extended families who want to stay close together while still having their own private space
