

Talia Villa

Region: Sicily Sleeps: 4

Overview

This wildly stylish villa in Sicily is a refreshing getaway where guests can flourish beneath the leafy arbor, or on the porch overlooking the crystalline Tyrrhenian sea. Here, modern does not mean sterile; colorful artwork, books, and tasteful ornaments line the walls (it's rather like staying at your artist friend's holiday home). With sea views teasing you from every room, the beauty of Sicily will infuse every moment you spend here.

When you need to cool down, you can choose either the small private pool, or take a short drive down the steep country path down to the sea. An outdoor shower lets you rinse away the sand before you rejoin the group. Have a barbecue out on the reclaimed railway sleeper deck, made easy by the additional sheltered outdoor kitchen. When you retire inside, you'll gather on the low purple sofa to sip Sicilian wine and plan the next day's adventure.

This holiday villa sits an hour east of Palermo, amid many local treasures. Cefalù (4 km) is a hub of ancient architecture and the best beaches in Sicily. Art lovers should visit the Mandralisca Museum and Il Duomo, a 12th century cathedral that dominates the town.

Location & Local Information

Just an hour east of Palermo, nestled between its natural bay and the granite mass of La Rocca, lies the charming town of Cefalù. This coastal gem combines medieval character with seaside beauty, framed by the majestic Norman-Arab-Byzantine cathedral, one of southern Europe's greatest churches.

Cefalù offers a long sandy beach with golden sands and clear waters—arguably one of Sicily's best. Popular in summer yet quieter than Taormina's, it is easily reached from the town, with public showers on the western side. The picturesque medieval streets are lined with shops and restaurants overlooking the rocky coast, perfect for relaxed evenings.

The town is steeped in history. Highlights include Il Duomo, built by King Roger II in 1131, and the remains of Roman baths and an ancient amphitheatre. Adventurous visitors can climb the promontory above town to discover ruins of a fortress and the temple of Diana, with breathtaking coastal views.

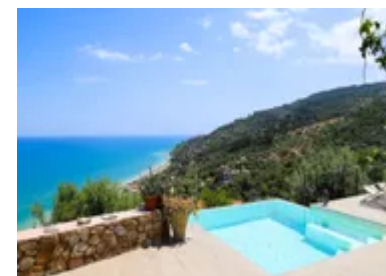

Cultural treasures extend to the Mandralisca Museum, home to Antonello da Messina's Portrait of an Unknown Man, as well as eclectic collections of shells and objets d'art.

Beyond the town, families can enjoy pedal boats at Ogliastrillo, fishing, or gentle hillside walks. To the south, the Madonie National Park offers hiking trails, charming villages such as Castelbuono, and magnificent mountain scenery.

Combining beach relaxation, historic wonders, and access to Sicily's natural beauty, Cefalù is one of the island's most captivating towns and an unmissable stop for travellers seeking variety and charm.

What we love

- The deck at this villa in Sicily, made of African hardwood railway sleepers, offers incomparable views of the Tyrrhenian sea
- Entertaining on the lovely leafy terrace beside the outdoor kitchen
- Culture, seaside life, and dining a short drive away in Cefalù

What you should know...

- Quiet and non-intrusive owners lives in a small house 15 metres from the villa during weekends to assist guests arriving/departing, he will be very happy to help
- Air-conditioning is featured in the bedrooms only
- Car hire is recommended: the access road leading up to the villa is steep and narrow if hiring a car we suggest hiring a sturdier vehicle
